Students may write to the Student Academic Integrity Committee within the period designated in the notice letter for appeal.

3.6.2 Plagiarism

Students are required to complete all their work from their own ideas and creative thinking, including coursework, research papers, dissertations, etc. Any non-independent completion of coursework will constitute plagiarism. When students quote other people’s work or ideas, proper acknowledgement of the sources is required. Quotations must be of a small proportion in the relevant coursework, dissertation, etc. Failure to do so will constitute plagiarism. In case of doubts about plagiarism, students should consult the lecturer(s) concerned.

Plagiarism includes:

- Copying information that has been or has not been published (including study results of thesis, technical reports, published theses, software codes and research data, coursework presentation and course notes of other students) without using quotation marks.
- paraphrasing or summarizing another person’s creative work without proper acknowledgement.
- quoting another person’s ideas without proper acknowledgement.
- quoting research results of group work in one’s own work without proper acknowledgement;
- copying information from the internet without proper acknowledgement.
- quoting other’s work in large proportion though with proper acknowledgement.

For any situations not mentioned above, the Student Academic Integrity Committee will have the final decision on whether plagiarism has been committed or not.

3.6.3 Distorting and falsifying research data

Falsifying the unstudied research results, including experimental data, survey data and software calculations, etc; coining new results and discoveries by hiding unfavorable information;

3.6.4 Others

- Inviting others to write academic articles on student’s behalf or writing for others;
- Publishing a research paper in another’s name without consent, or marking funded projects without the consent of the person-in-charge;
- Publishing research paper with multiple submissions;

- Influencing the assessment of research result, scholarship, academic paper, thesis defence and examinations etc. by improper means;
- Defaming, framing, threatening, taking revenge, abusing, or attacking maliciously the principal officers, supervisors, lecturers, thesis (or research achievements) referees and any student concerned.
- Submitting and providing false evidence of academic competence such as academic experience, achievements and certificates, etc; falsifying recommendations and evaluations, or opinions of supervisors or experts; and forging signatures of principal officers, supervisors or experts.
- Embezzling, vending and peddling without authorization the unpublished technological achievements of patent on technology, proprietary or confidential information and paid software.
- Producing and printing business cards similar to those of the staff of the University without authorization; or printing the designation of Master or Doctor on one's own business cards before being awarded with the degree.

The School of Graduate Studies is responsible for handling all reports on issues about academic ethics related to postgraduate students, and the Student Academic Integrity Committee shall have the assessment and determination on the violation. If necessary, an academic ethics assessment group is convened by both internal and external experts from the relevant discipline(s) to assess the violation. The Student Academic Integrity Committee shall then determine on the penalties. The School of Graduate Studies will impose disciplinary action commensurate with the gravity of the offence.

After graduation, if a student's thesis or academic papers published when he or she was in the university are found to violate academic ethics, his or her degree will be cancelled.

3.7 Having a substitute attending a class / doing assignment

Having a substitute attend a class / do assignment or attending a class / doing assignment for another student, is not permitted. Once found, the student will be imposed a minimum penalty of "Level Two Penalty" and a maximum penalty of "Level Four Penalty" upon resolution of the Student Academic Integrity Committee.

3.8 The Student Academic Integrity Committee can take appropriate disciplinary action against any breach of academic integrity that is not mentioned above.

3.9 Students who have received the penalty of "under observation in the University", "required to defer study", "required to withdraw from study" or "be expelled from the University" will lose their entitlement to a scholarship or grant if they are enjoying such a benefit.

3.10 For students who have received the penalty of "under observation in the University", "required to defer study", "required to withdraw from study" or "be expelled from the University", the University reserves the right to announce the punishment.

3.11 Appeals against the penalty imposed by the Student Academic Integrity Committee or the Student Discipline and Awards Committee may be made according to the University appeal procedures.
