

Department: Faculty of Law

Course Name International Trade Law

Hours per week 3

Number of Credits 3

Course Description This course provides students with an introduction to the private law part of international trade law of goods, with particular focus on international trade rules, influential international trade customs and latest business legislations used in each step of international trade process. It aims to provide a practical and novel understanding of international trade law. Specifically, international trade custom is an important part of international trade rules. This course commences with an examination to the meaning of different international trade customs. It then discusses the nature, legal effect and application of each international trade customs. It further researches specific international trade customs with relevant cases.